Mr. Dean Acheson once got into trouble for suggesting that America's final China policy should wait until the dust had settled. There is a tendency to wait until the dust, in that dusty land, has settled. It continues to obscure the outlook, and it is difficult to see what the security Council, which is scheduled to deal with Formosa and the Straits at today's meeting, can do. A few more weeks will see a risk another snafu from Peking, whose refusal to attend a Council discussion on the matter of Formosa was couched in forthright, indeed almost brutal, terms. It may have to satisfy itself with a resolution in general terms and the hope that a tacit cease-fire will come about; after which it may be possible, by secret diplomacy, to work out an understanding.

It does seem important that the dust should be allowed to settle. Impatience on the part of any of those directly concerned in the Formosa issue could have the effect of thickening the dust-clouds and, perhaps, impairing the effect of the dust. It is by far the most serious and dangerous of the several serious and dangerous issues which today, in a world both halves of which have thought it necessary, in the last weeks, to boost of their superior thermo-nuclear potential. There is no reason to suppose that the recent changes in Soviet hierarchy have made the Formosa question any worse. In reality, a fact that the Marshal has again sent out of his way to be nice to Peking and range his country alongside China. That may be a Soviet confidence in the peaceful settlement of the Formosa and the Straits dispute; or it may mean encouragement that Peking, whose letter to the security Council seemed to leave no room for compromise.

But there are hopeful signs. If the use of the American Seventh Fleet as cover for the Nationalist evacuation of the Tachens was regarded by Peking as a challenge, the challenge has not been taken up, although the whole operation took place with a range of the Communist guns. Another hopeful sign is that the President's study refusal to be drawn into clarifying his statements about the Quemoy and Matsu islands. He has been harshly criticized for his vagueness on this question, which leaves it open to the U.S. Government to intervene or not, as it may think fit. In the event of a mainland attempt to occupy these groups, the fact that the President has not moved his hand may be evidence of reluctance to risk American operations, which would almost certainly be opposed in London and the Formosa and Pescadore ranges.

In spite of the special powers given recently by Congress to the President, and the Formosa defense treaty, which was ratified a few days ago, there is an impression that the United States Government's assessment of the China issue has become nearer that of its Western allies instead of moving further away. There is a feeling that the Communists are, of course, as strong as ever; but confidence in Chiang Kai-shek as the provider of an alternative regime on the mainland, is probably much less than it was. The Formosa defense treaty has some reassuring qualifications. It does not recognize Nationalist China's sovereignty over Formosa; makes no provision for American support outside Formosa; and the Pescadores would have approval is first obtained; and warns Chiang Kai-shek that he cannot hope to drag the United States behind him in a military adventure.

In present circumstances, of course, there is not the slightest chance of America's letting Formosa go. There would also seem to be very small chance of an outright assault on the island from the mainland. It will be interesting, however, to watch what happens to the scores of island outposts now in Nationalist possession. If these islands fall, Nationalist morale will fall with them — and so, according to some observers, will Chiang Kai-shek's leadership.

4 Dead Sea Scrolls Acquired; National Trust Set Up

Jerusalem Post Staff
Four of the seven ancient scrolls discovered near the Dead Sea in 1947 have been purchased in the United States and brought back to Jerusalem through the efforts of General Yigal Yadin, special procurator of the S.D. and R.H. Gottman Foundation of New York, and the American Fund for Israel Institutions. The scrolls were offered for sale by the Metropolitan of the Syrian Monastery of St. Mark in the Old City of Jerusalem.

The other three scrolls had been acquired by the late Professor Eliezer Sukenik of the Hebrew University, father of General Yadin. The Prime Minister, Mr. Moshe Sharet, announced the news in person to a Jerusalem press conference yesterday. At its meeting yesterday the Government decided to set up a national corporation to be known as "The Shrine of the Book" Trust, which will acquire and hold in perpetual trust the scrolls and related documents of Biblical and related literature, and will arrange for their display to the public. The first duty of the Trust will be to take possession of the seven Dead Sea Scrolls, which will be displayed in a special hall in the new national building when they are completed.

Work of Norman Fund
Mr. Sharet said he regarded it as a special privilege to make this announcement to the public. His words were recorded and broadcast by the radio in its evening bulletin. He also said that the American Fund for Israel Institutions, which he had visited in New York, was a very important organization. He said he had seen and heard of the work of the Norman Fund, as the American Fund is popularly known, referring to the work of the Norman Fund in the field of Jewish education and its moving spirit. The President of the Hebrew University, Dr. R. K. Masar, who was present at the press conference, added: "We now have one of the greatest historical treasures in the world."

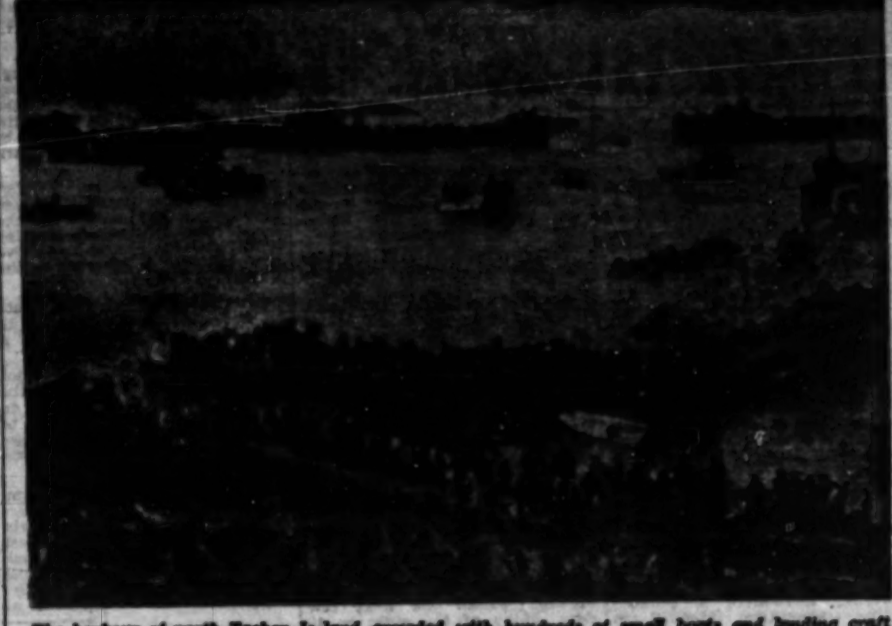

The Board of Trustees of the Shrine of the Book, which will be headed by the President of the Hebrew University, Dr. R. K. Masar, will be composed of representatives of the Ministry of Education and Culture, the President of the Hebrew University, a representative of the Jewish Agency, a representative of the American Fund for Israel Institutions, General Yigal Yadin, Editor-in-Chief of the Talmudic Encyclopedia, and Dr. J. Klausner, Professor Emeritus of Hebrew Literature. (Continued on Page 4, Col. 4)

Draft Income Tax Law Approved

The Ministerial Economic Committee yesterday concluded its discussion of proposed income tax amendments and approved a draft law. It also approved a draft law amending the customs regulations. The Committee discussed the question of the import of clothing by institutions. It decided that such clothing be turned over to the Government and be distributed to needy persons by a committee composed of representatives of the Ministries of Education and Culture, the Jewish Agency and a representative of the institution to whom the shipment was sent.

A supplement to the 1954/55 Development Budget was approved. It arises out of the agreement between the Government and the Jewish National Fund with regard to the transfer of land to the latter. Discussion was begun on the plan for a savings-for-building project, which would make possible the acquisition of housing through savings. Discussion on this matter is to be continued at the Committee's next session. The income tax amendments will be subject to a provision that dividends on new securities issued by designated corporations will be exempt from the tax, although the tax deducted by the corporation will be collected as usual.

The committee is to report this week, and its report is to be considered at next Sunday's Cabinet meeting. At that time, the Cabinet is also to decide on the proposal of the Minister of Justice, Mr. Pinhas Rosen, that elections to the Knesset and local authorities be held on separate dates.

Also to be decided next Sunday is whether Israeli citizens travelling on Israeli ships on election day will have the right to vote. The committee appointed yesterday is composed of the Attorney General, Mr. Haim Cohn; the Government Secretary, Mr. Ze'ev Sharet; the Director General of the Ministry of Interior, Mr. A. Moyal; the Elections Controller, Mr. Michael Yizman; and the Director of the Office Mechanization Centre, Mr. Y. Gratz.

Cabinet and Agency To Discuss N. Africa

A joint meeting of the Cabinet and the Jewish Agency Executive will be held this week to discuss the mobilization of funds to carry out rescue operations in North Africa. Mr. S. S. Horowitz, Head of the Jewish Agency's Immigration Department, told a press conference in Jerusalem yesterday. Sixty thousand Jews must be brought here annually if North African Jewry is to be saved, he said. The current budget allows for the immigration of only 30,000 this year.

Peking Says Formosa Fall Nearer

TAIPEI, Sunday. — China began shelling the Nationalist island stronghold of Quemoy today and declared that the "liberation" of the Tachens was a long stride towards the conquest of Formosa. Peking's New China News Agency announced that "all enemy-occupied islands of the Chukchi (province) coast are now liberated, except the southernmost Nanchishan island. The agency claimed that the Chinese Army's capture of Yik-shing island some two weeks ago had placed Gen. Chiang Kai-shek's troops on the Tachens in an untenable position, and that they began to flee under cover of American armed forces on February 7 after pillaging and seizing the houses of the Tachen population."

USSR, China Renew Solidarity Pledge

LONDON, Sunday (Reuters). — The Soviet Union and China renewed their pledges of solidarity today while the West waited further Soviet reaction to Britain and Indian diplomatic efforts to establish a basis for cease-fire talks over Formosa. The Soviet and Chinese statements were exchanged on the 35th anniversary of their treaty of friendship and mutual assistance. The Soviet statement, broadcast over Moscow Radio, said: "The Soviet Union and China are united in their solidarity with the Chinese people in their struggle for the liberation of Formosa. The disclosure by Moscow Radio last night of the Soviet proposal for a 10-day cease-fire conference, excluding the Formosa Government, was not expected to evoke any definite reaction in the other capitals. It was chiefly because the British Ambassador in Moscow, Sir William Hayter, has already delivered the British reply to the proposal, put forward by Foreign Minister Vyacheslav Molotov on February 4."

Rightist Colleagues Rap Ke on Lincoln Day

CHICAGO, Sunday (Reuters). — President Eisenhower was bitterly attacked by conservative members of his own Republican Party, including Senator Joseph McCarthy, at a rally here yesterday marking the anniversary of the death of Abraham Lincoln. Senator McCarthy, the last of seven speakers who were invited to the Lincoln Day celebration, has embraced the notion that Communism and the free world can exist side by side. He called this a false and dangerous policy. He said that the evacuation of the Tachens islands was not a victory, and added: "I think the fact that the Republican Administration has ordered a retreat is the outstanding development of the current crisis."

Khrushchev Wants More Normal Political, Trade Ties with US

NEW YORK, Sunday (Reuters). — Mr. Nikita Khrushchev, First Secretary of the Soviet Communist Party, told an American lawyer 12 days ago: "We want more normal relations with the U.S. but the first prerequisite is some normal trade relations." Mr. Marshall MacDuffie, the lawyer, said on his return from a visit to Moscow that the Communist Party leader also told him that Russia was allowing more Americans to visit that country and hoped that more Russians would visit the U.S. At the Shannon Airport in Ireland, the Russian Ambassador to Washington, Mr. George Savitsky, stated that a meeting between President Eisenhower and the new Soviet Defense Minister, Marshal Shulov, was possible. When reporters asked him if he thought it likely that Marshal

Pfiffman's Hopes Rise as Rightists Pledge Support

PARIS, Sunday (Reuters). — M. Pierre Pfiffman's chances of forming France's 21st post-war government were strengthened tonight by the decision of the Conservative Party to support him in the National Assembly. M. Pfiffman told reporters early today that he did not expect any further difficulties in recruiting a Cabinet and would probably get one together today. Opposition from the Conservatives, Gaullists, Peasants and Independents — resulted from his offer of only five portfolios to this group of 100 members. M. Pfiffman has now earmarked seven Ministries to his leaders and this morning a meeting of independent voters by 3 to 2, with two abstentions, in favor of joining his Government.

Yehoshua Ben-Zvi, was killed by a bullet fired from a Jordanian Legion machine gun. The Jordanian Premier, Mr. Tawfik Abu Huda, and General Ibrahim Haddad, Commander of the Arab Legion, conferred at length in Amman on Saturday night, following the border shooting. The Israel-Jordan Mixed Armistice Commission is to meet informally today to discuss the provisions of the agreement for the repatriation of captured soldiers from both sides. "Frelatin," another Old City daily, reported. The U.N. has proposed that until their repatriation they should be treated as prisoners of war according to the Geneva Convention as long as they had not committed hostile actions in the country into which they had crossed.

New Syrian Gov't Not Ruling Out West Ties

Syria's weak-old Cabinet crisis ended last night as Shihab al Assad, Nationalist leader, formed his Government and presented his list of Ministers to President Hashim Attilah, who immediately issued a decree confirming the nominations. But Assad was seen in far different mood when he went to Parliament last Saturday for a vote of confidence, for the A-Shab Party (Populists) which holds a slight majority in the House has resolutely refused to participate in any government following the fall of the Kheury regime directly after the conclusion of the Arab Premier's conference in Cairo. Assad, in a statement after he had presented his list to the President, declared that Syria would join with the West if such an alliance would "fulfill Syrian aspirations." He said that his domestic policy would emphasize the raising of the living standards in the country.

Turks Steering Clear Of Israel-Arab Rift

NEW YORK, Sunday (INA). — The Turkish authorities are opposing the Israeli request to include in the defense pact a possible reference to the U.N. resolutions affecting the Middle East, according to the New York Times today from Ankara. The report stated that the Turks do not want to become embroiled in the Arab-Israeli dispute, even though they voted for the partition of Palestine in 1947. On the other hand, the Turkish officials have been at pains to play down the recent visit in Ankara of the official Israeli trade delegation, which was part of the clearing agreement. The Anatolian news agency twice issued denials that conversations were in progress or that the delegation was at the Turkish capital.

PLANNED FOR JORDAN

The Turkish National Assembly has approved the decision to present Jordan with three military planes, according to NEADS yesterday. Mr. Eric Johnston, President Eisenhower's personal envoy to the Middle East, completed his series of conferences with Jordanian leaders in a three-hour session yesterday according to NEADS last night. He will leave Amman today for Damascus and Beirut to continue his talks concerning the Jordan Valley water development project, and will arrive in Israel at the beginning of next week. The Jordan Defense Minister, Awwad Nusseibeh, stated last night that the proposed Jordan project "is of vital importance" to the country. He said that Jordan cannot afford to enter at the plan and must give it earnest and thorough study before it can be accepted. He said that Jordan is now studying the Lebanon proposal from the United States, but that it is not prepared to join any defense pact or organization at present, but is taking this step for the "Fertile Crescent" project, via the Turco-Iraq pact.

Egypt, Iraq Planning Big Irrigation Projects

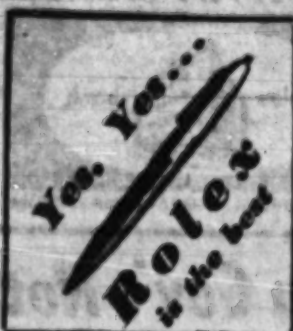

LONDON, Sunday (INA). — The "New Nations and Nations" reported from Cairo that a plan to bring the Nile waters to the Sinai desert, through a tunnel under the Suez Canal, is in its final stage. The project is intended to irrigate and make fertile some 60,000 acres of the desert area to provide employment for Arab refugees who have spent seven long and frustrating years in Gaza refugee camps. Meanwhile, "The New York Times" reported from Baghdad that Iraq is preparing to embark on the decisive phase of a gigantic irrigation and flood control program. The plan envisages doubling the area under crops and increasing yields on land now cultivated. Development of the Tigris-Euphrates basin is expected to be the largest item in the five-year $640m. economic development program to be announced in Baghdad shortly. The program is to be financed by oil revenues. Floods on the two rivers, occurring two or three years, cause crop damage amounting to $70m. a year.

Health Centres for Triangle

The Development Authority has transferred IL100,000 to the Ministry of Health for the construction of two rural health centres in the Little Triangle. It is learned, Building operations are to start immediately.

This is the first allocation to be made from Wafk funds which have recently been freed for health, social and cultural projects for Israel's Modern Community of 125,000.

The establishment of these centres was first proposed two years ago by Mr. Yehuda Mandel, M.P. from the Little Triangle, who expressed his own and the villagers' readiness to contribute land and funds for such projects. Last year the various Ministries concerned approved the project which is based on a new trend in rural medicine concentrating on small health centres instead of large central hospitals serving wide areas. Each of the two centres will consist of a two-story building built of local stone, and will include maternity and general wards. They will be located at Baka el-Gharbiya, in the northern sector of the Little Triangle, and at Yarak in the southern part. The total population of 30,000. Maintenance costs, estimated at IL40,000 annually, will be provided by the Ministry of Health while the Local Councils will be responsible for sanitation, water and electricity services.

The centres will also include a lecture hall and preventive medicine and infant welfare sections. Each will have a physiotherapy, nursing and a medical attendant.

Views on Flying 30 Years Hence

A preview of air travel in 1985 was given recently at a special Cosmic Symposium held at New York's Hayden Planetarium on the occasion of the World Air Lines' 20th anniversary. The participating scientists predicted that within another 50 years air travel will be by 1,500 k.p.h. at an altitude of 30 kilometers and may be powered with nuclear energy.

Dr. Werner von Braun, former NASA's chief, and now chief of U.S. guided missile development, predicted that the 1985 aircraft will be powered by rocket motors and will be able to fly at 1,500 k.p.h. at an altitude of 30 kilometers.

US Now Claims 30 Atomic Cannon

NEW YORK, Sunday (UP). — The U.S. armed forces now have 30 atomic cannon each capable of firing shells more devastating than the atom bomb dropped on Hiroshima, and more on the way, according to Attorney-General Herbert Brownell, last night.

He told the National Association of Attorneys General that since 1953 five atomic cannon battalions, each equipped with six cannons, have joined the military forces.

Portsmouth, which has not won a League match since the end of December, returned to winning form at the expense of the more powerful West Ham, which took a 2-1 home beating.

Red Army May Take Over If Khrushchev's Policies Fail

By GEORGE LICHTHEIM

LONDON, February 8. — WHATEVER else Malenkov may have done or failed to do, he has made newspaper history by the morning of his fall. The "Daily Mail" came out with a prominently displayed Moscow message from Mr. Kingsbury Smith, the Soviet correspondent, giving the gist of an interview with Khrushchev in which the Communist Party boss emphatically denied all rumors of a struggle for power between himself and Malenkov. Three hours after the edition was on the street, the BBC started broadcasting the news of Malenkov's resignation.

It can be claimed that Khrushchev has never taken Malenkov all that seriously, and was merely trying to correct the perspective of Western newspapers. Still, in Fleet Street it was regarded as rather tough luck on both Malenkov and the "Daily Mail."

Before long it became manifest that there was one of the most important discoveries in the whole history of Biblical scholarship. The date of the scrolls was agreed by scholars to be somewhere towards the close of the Second Temple era and so the world now possessed its earliest authentic written manuscripts of part of the whole of the book of the prophet Isaiah was one of the documents discovered.

It was perhaps one of those significant quirks of fate that the discovery should have coincided with the first definite moves which were to culminate a few weeks later in the announcement of a Jewish State in Israel. A month and a half later, in the setting up of the third Jewish commonwealth. But one of the results was that those scrolls which were still in the possession of the Syrian Metropolitan in the Old City were plundered from Israel. These scrolls have now been redeemed and the occasion has rightly been hailed by the Prime Minister, the President of the Hebrew University and scholars in Israel as an occasion of national rejoicing. It is also noteworthy that the man responsible for the conduct of the negotiations which brought the scrolls home to Israel was General Yisrael Yadin, the son of the late Professor A. S. Yadin, who discovered and deciphered the scrolls and whose last years were clouded with disappointment because they apparently were not to become part of the national possession.

But, as the scrolls declare, there is a real Israel in the universe, and the concatenation of events: an act of inspired generosity and other factors have brought these precious documents home to the land of the people whose genius gave them birth. It is also part of this curious providential picture that the outpourings of Professor Solomon Zeitlin questioning the genuineness of the scrolls made the acquisition by Israel partly possible; for the reputation of that scholar, whose name is in this instance, was nevertheless sufficient to deter some would-be buyers with unlimited purses and so at length they became available for Israel, albeit at no mean material consideration.

We are indeed a strange and curious people; but none the less our unique characteristics are proven justified in the broad perspective of historical events. These are very trying and difficult times for Israel. We are surrounded by bitter foes and surrounding circumstances, even our friends in the West stretch our anxieties to breaking point. But nevertheless the acquisition of what those who put their whole faith in material things might describe as a few decaying manuscripts fills the whole nation with a deep joy and a heightening of hope and confidence. What is the reason for this? Because under the hard facade of modernity, of rationalism, scientificism and cynicism which combine in the fabric of national life with the simple faith by which tens of thousands still live, the mass of the people of this country know it is the Law, in whatever modern dress it is refined, reinterpreted or restated that this nation lives and finds the root and cause of its being. And so when precious and unique writings which throw so much light upon the interpretation of that Law and upon its authenticity are brought home to Israel, then indeed we do well to rejoice.

The idea of a national "Shrine of the Book" which will be built around the scrolls and which will be the beginning of a return of many scattered manuscripts and documents of our Law and our dispersed culture from all lands is one which will undoubtedly fire the imagination of the nation. It is said that the Law will one day go forth from Zion; to do so it must first come back here, and the latest development in the history of the scrolls is a sign that there is a people dwelling in Zion who are still responsive to that Law.

Goldmann Tackles French Zionist Crisis

By MAURICE CARR

PARIS has become the temporary headquarters of the Wandering Commander of Diaspora Jewry, Dr. Nahum Goldmann. He has been unusually busy, directing simultaneously several important operations.

To the Austrians he has addressed an ultimatum that the Jews will break off negotiations if no decent offer of compensation for Jewish property is forthcoming from Vienna by Wednesday, February 9. The implied threat is that, if driven to it, the Jews will set out enlightening world opinion how Austria participated in, rather than suffered Nazi persecution, and how even today Vienna is subsidizing Nazis new and old, to the detriment of the Jewish victims.

At a session of the World Jewish Congress Executive, Goldmann asserted the adoption of a motion demanding German rearmament. That would have irritated Chancellor Adenauer, who after all is paying reparations. Instead, a resolution was passed, while pointing to the dangers of German rearmament, tacitly accepted as an unavoidable evil. This kind of compromise is called in French negotio-bene, meaning negotio-bene — a shade not usual in politics.

Behind the front of the Claims Conference, which met here to fix the allocation of funds for 1955, Goldmann has been striving manfully to quell a major revolt. The Europeans are dissatisfied. German reparations, they argue, are supposed to be dispensed by and for the Jews, displaced by Nazi terror. Hence New York has usurped full power in the Claims Conference.

Day in, day out, from early morning to late night, Goldmann has seen scores of petitioners and axe-grinders — from the professional shrewd with sidekick to the millionaire, from the rabbi to the millionaire, from the rabbi to the millionaire, from the rabbi to the millionaire.

Whether or not the enigmatic Hummel is reinstated and the Federation in the French Zionist movement is reformed, it is not only here, but in varying degrees throughout the Zionist movement, a new spirit will be created. The organizational forms of world Zionism are reshaped to present-day realities. Goldmann has been having many consultations and devoting much thought to the elaboration of a new Jewish Program to take the place of the old Basic Program. The new World Zionist Congress must accomplish what the last one failed to do — to restate the fundamental aim of Zionism as after the creation of the Jewish State.

New Goal
When I asked Goldmann to give me the benefit of his views on this cardinal problem, he replied — turning on the cold tap — that he was not paid by the Jewish Agency to brief its correspondent on what to write. Now it seems to your correspondent that if Nahum Goldmann sees the light in this city where Herzl passed the "Jubilee" — he will define the new goal of Zionism as "the consolidation of the state of Israel and the promotion of Jewish life in the Diaspora." It is as simple as that.

The Jewish State is here, but it will take another half-century to stand on its own feet. During that half-century, at least, neither world Jewry nor Israel will be able to survive. The question whether a majority or minority of the Jewish people should settle ultimately in Israel must be left to future history. It will be a very hard reality, not by noble affirmations. That was the way of the slips in the past, and that will be the way hereafter.

In the Diaspora, the primary objective of the Zionist movement must surely be to sustain Judaism — there can be no Zionism without Jews. There can be no Zionism without Jews. There can be no Zionism without Jews. There can be no Zionism without Jews.

At the time of writing, the French Government has just fallen, despite a warning from Prime Minister Mendès-France to the deputies of the National Assembly that they were taking their "grave decision, perhaps in many years." Whatever the motives of the Opposition, the overthrow of Mendes-France at this crucial stage of Franco-Israeli negotiations will be interpreted throughout North Africa as a diabolical move to rule for Tunisia, a renunciation of liberalism in Morocco and Algeria, and a return to the old until the spiritual revival and the organizational forms of world Zionism are reshaped to present-day realities. Goldmann has been having many consultations and devoting much thought to the elaboration of a new Jewish Program to take the place of the old Basic Program. The new World Zionist Congress must accomplish what the last one failed to do — to restate the fundamental aim of Zionism as after the creation of the Jewish State.

Letter from Paris
A well-known lawyer, a former chef de cabinet of the late Prime Minister, Hummel, is in Paris. He speaks no Yiddish, is indeed not too well versed in Jewish affairs, but he does speak the most elegant French and is on the most intimate terms with the French political leaders. He is a left-wing Socialist, and from the outset he let it be known that he would make it his business to try and win over to the Zionist cause the tens of thousands of French Jews who are at present under the communist banner. It is, moreover, his ambition to help bring about a vast rapprochement between the whole Communist world and Zionism. He believes the Kremlin can be induced if properly approached, to abandon its hostility to Zionism on ideological and practical grounds.

As the leader of a "united front" campaign against German rearmament, Hummel has been in the French Zionist Federation he received written permission from Spichak and Goldmann to pursue his activities. Hummel has presided over meetings where Jewish Communists have been shown the Jewish State. He has also, believe it or not, sat on platforms where influential French Jews have been shown the Jewish State. He has also, believe it or not, sat on platforms where influential French Jews have been shown the Jewish State.

Whether or not the enigmatic Hummel is reinstated and the Federation in the French Zionist movement is reformed, it is not only here, but in varying degrees throughout the Zionist movement, a new spirit will be created. The organizational forms of world Zionism are reshaped to present-day realities. Goldmann has been having many consultations and devoting much thought to the elaboration of a new Jewish Program to take the place of the old Basic Program. The new World Zionist Congress must accomplish what the last one failed to do — to restate the fundamental aim of Zionism as after the creation of the Jewish State.

Realist's Letter
Editor, The Jerusalem Post
Sir, — I find myself in full agreement with Mr. Doron in his article on the Israel stock market in the Jerusalem Post of January 18. In this connection, I should like to raise a not unimportant point for the benefit of all concerned.

Even our own Government securities, as far as they bear interest, are subject to tax deduction of 30 per cent of their interest yield. As Government securities, in Israel and elsewhere, are low-interest securities, their popularity with investors will be still more, admittedly, there are people entitled to a refund of that tax deduction, but I seriously doubt whether an appreciable percentage of these will bother to apply and to wait for it.

It would make much more sense to pay out all interest derived from Government securities net, i.e. tax free. The loss in revenue is not unlikely to be set off by administrative savings (no need to deduct, compute, refund, etc.) and by a more likely demand (and a higher stock price) for Government securities. Even the State should take pains to make its securities attractive when acting as "bond salesman" at home.

Yours etc.

POOR MILK
Editor, The Jerusalem Post
Sir, — In their advertisement in your paper, the Tzema-Negosh Dairies Ltd., of Kfar Shmaryahu, submit a number of reasons why the public should drink their sterilized milk. One claim states that the milk is of high nutritional value. It contains 2.5 per cent fat, which is higher than the fat content of usual milk.

This fat content presumably applies to the present winter milk supply. Summer milk, therefore, is expected to have a lower value. I believe that I am correct in stating that a fair average of fat in Israel milk is nearest to 3.5 per cent, also, that 3.0 per cent or more is the minimum allowed in most countries.

Dare I ask, then, whether this is the best quality milk Israel dairies can offer the public?

Yours etc.

KEEPING POSTED
A VISITOR to Ashkelon says that while in the ancient days it was renowned as the birthplace of both Herod the Great and of the humble but excellent shallop, nowadays it comes to specialize in the sale of Roman tombs. The beach that was excavated a dozen years ago but is only now being prepared for exhibition to the public contains some remarkable murals by an artist of distinction, and even so many Roman walls bear only the traces of paintings or have obvious in design than the decorations that have appeared on some restaurant walls here lately. On the way back into the town the guide invited him to look into the premises of the New Bank of Ashkelon, and he saw that the walls there were also decorated, though with oil paintings. The pictures are a collection of works of the classical period, probably as a symbol of shifting values not sensitive to the changing tides.

ASHKELOH has also built a clock tower in its civic center, a type of structure that has gone out of fashion since the introduction of time signals on the radio. Two of the faces showed the correct time, and two others showed a time of their own, one of them about five hours ahead which is too much even for a forward-looking place like Ashkelon. It seems the clock cannot be adjusted by anyone but the Tel Aviv expert who installed it, and who does not often find time to come down to Ashkelon and check up. He says nobody even minded that the famous clock on the Jaffa tower was wrong for many years, and in the end it was broken down by a thousand of broken time according to the Arabic reckoning. This was taken as a sign of pity, and the clock was not set right. It is said that this is Ashkelon time, and outside it is the Israeli tourist's time.

ANYONE who noted that another Jerusalem manufacturer has paid his Israel tax for making chocolate wafers with inedible mineral oil will perhaps be comforted to know that Israel is not alone in this trouble. Just about the time the Knesset was discussing means to stop the adulteration of foodstuffs the parliament in New Delhi was doing the same thing. A New Delhi paper reported a curious complaint being adulterated now, and that as a result of this a family had been prevented from committing suicide. The report quotes Mr. Gurnukh Singh Musaffir, who was speaking on a bill to check food adulteration, as saying:

"I have just recently found by the shaggy head of a family who wanted to make both ends meet, the man decided to commit suicide, but he found that the adulterated oil was not so good as he thought it was. He was waiting and waited for death to come, but in vain, with children crying some when dawn broke."

It seems a little unfair that he should have concluded his account of the case by asking that adulteration of foodstuffs and allied products "should be treated on a par with murder under the law." For the benefit of water-eaters' parents, the maximum consumption age is around 10 years old — we are able to state that adulteration is just not so poisonous, or even harmful unless consumed regularly over a matter of years. In fact, as it cannot be dispensed with at one time used for frying potatoes in Hollywood slimming diets.

ONE of the advantages of winter in Tel Aviv is that some of the windows and balcony doors are kept shut, and people do not have to hear the noise of their neighbors' lawnmowers and don't have to go to the same thing as the neighbors. But apparently it is all a matter of conditions.

Red Army May Take Over If Khrushchev's Policies Fail

By GEORGE LICHTHEIM

LONDON, February 8. — WHATEVER else Malenkov may have done or failed to do, he has made newspaper history by the morning of his fall. The "Daily Mail" came out with a prominently displayed Moscow message from Mr. Kingsbury Smith, the Soviet correspondent, giving the gist of an interview with Khrushchev in which the Communist Party boss emphatically denied all rumors of a struggle for power between himself and Malenkov. Three hours after the edition was on the street, the BBC started broadcasting the news of Malenkov's resignation.

It can be claimed that Khrushchev has never taken Malenkov all that seriously, and was merely trying to correct the perspective of Western newspapers. Still, in Fleet Street it was regarded as rather tough luck on both Malenkov and the "Daily Mail."

Before long it became manifest that there was one of the most important discoveries in the whole history of Biblical scholarship. The date of the scrolls was agreed by scholars to be somewhere towards the close of the Second Temple era and so the world now possessed its earliest authentic written manuscripts of part of the whole of the book of the prophet Isaiah was one of the documents discovered.

It was perhaps one of those significant quirks of fate that the discovery should have coincided with the first definite moves which were to culminate a few weeks later in the announcement of a Jewish State in Israel. A month and a half later, in the setting up of the third Jewish commonwealth. But one of the results was that those scrolls which were still in the possession of the Syrian Metropolitan in the Old City were plundered from Israel. These scrolls have now been redeemed and the occasion has rightly been hailed by the Prime Minister, the President of the Hebrew University and scholars in Israel as an occasion of national rejoicing. It is also noteworthy that the man responsible for the conduct of the negotiations which brought the scrolls home to Israel was General Yisrael Yadin, the son of the late Professor A. S. Yadin, who discovered and deciphered the scrolls and whose last years were clouded with disappointment because they apparently were not to become part of the national possession.

But, as the scrolls declare, there is a real Israel in the universe, and the concatenation of events: an act of inspired generosity and other factors have brought these precious documents home to the land of the people whose genius gave them birth. It is also part of this curious providential picture that the outpourings of Professor Solomon Zeitlin questioning the genuineness of the scrolls made the acquisition by Israel partly possible; for the reputation of that scholar, whose name is in this instance, was nevertheless sufficient to deter some would-be buyers with unlimited purses and so at length they became available for Israel, albeit at no mean material consideration.

We are indeed a strange and curious people; but none the less our unique characteristics are proven justified in the broad perspective of historical events. These are very trying and difficult times for Israel. We are surrounded by bitter foes and surrounding circumstances, even our friends in the West stretch our anxieties to breaking point. But nevertheless the acquisition of what those who put their whole faith in material things might describe as a few decaying manuscripts fills the whole nation with a deep joy and a heightening of hope and confidence. What is the reason for this? Because under the hard facade of modernity, of rationalism, scientificism and cynicism which combine in the fabric of national life with the simple faith by which tens of thousands still live, the mass of the people of this country know it is the Law, in whatever modern dress it is refined, reinterpreted or restated that this nation lives and finds the root and cause of its being. And so when precious and unique writings which throw so much light upon the interpretation of that Law and upon its authenticity are brought home to Israel, then indeed we do well to rejoice.

The idea of a national "Shrine of the Book" which will be built around the scrolls and which will be the beginning of a return of many scattered manuscripts and documents of our Law and our dispersed culture from all lands is one which will undoubtedly fire the imagination of the nation. It is said that the Law will one day go forth from Zion; to do so it must first come back here, and the latest development in the history of the scrolls is a sign that there is a people dwelling in Zion who are still responsive to that Law.
